QUALITY THROUGH PRODUCT TESTING

When it comes to product testing, the Nutraceutical team is rigorous—from the moment the raw materials come through our warehouse receiving doors, to final product testing for certain contaminants, such as gluten. We know how important testing is to the QUALITY of our finished goods. Our in-house laboratories screen over a thousand samples each week using numerous testing methods (including USP) and protocols.

Here is a description of the testing methods we use as our ingredients make their way through our manufacturing and laboratory facilities to their final journey into bottling, packaging, shipping and finally, into your hands.

► RECEIVING

As soon as any raw material is delivered to our facility, it is quarantined. Why? Because we don't want to use anything until it has undergone a battery of tests to ensure its identity according to its accompanying documentation.

► SAMPLING

Raw material containers are then taken into a "clean room" and samples are taken using sterile tools to prevent any cross-contamination. Samples are then bagged and tagged and issued a lot number, which will carry them all the way through the manufacturing process to the final finished product.

► INITIAL SENSORY TESTING

An initial organoleptic (sensory) testing is done while the material is in receiving. Does it look, feel, smell, and taste right? If not, why not? This is especially important with herbs, which can vary widely in color from batch to batch. Perhaps the material was harvested at a different time of the year, or the growing conditions changed? Was it extracted in a different way? The answers must be satisfactory or the material is rejected outright.

► PHYSICAL CHARACTERISTICS TESTING

Then, each sample is tested for moisture content, particle size and density to ensure that it is within standard limits, as these characteristics will impact how much we can put in a capsule or tablet and how well it will blend with other ingredients.

► LABORATORY TESTING

Samples are then sent to our microbial laboratory and others are sent to our main laboratory to test its identity, potency and purity.

► MICROBIAL TESTING

Our microbial laboratory screens samples for a variety of microorganisms. Specific tests include total plate count, pathogens and yeast/mold.

► DISINTEGRATION AND DISSOLUTION TESTING

Our tablets, capsules and softgels are tested to ensure appropriate disintegration takes place in accordance with USP and in-house standards. They are then agitated in an appropriate media and must dissolve within a specified time.

► IDENTITY AND POTENCY

In our main laboratory, samples are tested for identity to make sure the sample corresponds to its documentation from the supplier. For our Guaranteed Potency extracts, we test the sample for specific phytonutrients and amounts using several high-end detectors employing improved analytical specificity and sensitivity. With chemicals (such as vitamins or specialty substances) we test to ensure they meet our stringent specifications.

► CONTAMINANT TESTING

Certain herbs are tested for pesticides and herbicides. Minerals and herbs are also screened for heavy metals, including cadmium, lead and mercury by specialized ICP-MS (Inductively-Coupled Plasma-Mass Spectrometer) to ensure they meet California's Prop 65 limits. Many of our products are screened for the presence of gluten using enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay (ELISA) techniques.

► IRRADIATION

Where suspected, we screen for irradiation by Pulsed PSL (Pulsed Photostimulated Luminescence). Irradiation is a means of reducing microbiological organisms in a material by exposure to radiant energy. Irradiation may result in compromised efficacy of the plant and its natural ingredients.

Only after this process are the raw materials released from quarantine and distributed for manufacturing among our brands. HOWEVER, our testing doesn't end there!

► STABILITY TESTING

Products are placed under accelerated conditions using a temperature/humidity environmental chamber or entered into a real-time stability program. Most of the products within the Nutraceutical Family of Brands™ are shelf-stable for one to three and half years. We stamp a lot number and a use-by date on each label so you can be assured a fresh product when purchased.

► LABEL VERIFICATION

And finally, to ensure that all of our products meet label claims and that our labels reflect the latest FDA regulations, we pass them through our research and development team and our legal department to verify that any cautionary or warning statements comply with industry recommendations.
